

January 22nd 2019

To Whom It May Concern;

I completed my medical training in Ege University, School of Medicine, Izmir/Turkey in 2012. I specialized in internal medicine in 2016 and started working as a research fellow in Marmara University, School of Medicine, Istanbul/Turkey since 2017. My clinical and translational research interest is focused on chronic viral hepatitis, liver cirrhosis and complications and hepatocellular carcinoma. In 2018, we built a hepatocellular carcinoma biobank in our university and planning to focus my research interest mainly in basic science and genetics of hepatocellular carcinoma. Besides, as a graduate of an American College in Turkey, I am glad to denote that I'm fluent in English. I am hoping to participate in spiritual projects and be a leader of inspiring projects globally one day. To reach my goals, I am ready to show my effort to improve my CV and learn from mentors of EASL. Other than medicine, I am interested in music, history and sports.

Sincerely,
Coskun Ozer Demirtas, MD
